Pipe bombs sent to top Democrats including former President Barack Obama and Hillary Clinton and the offices of CNN set off a nationwide manhunt. 2

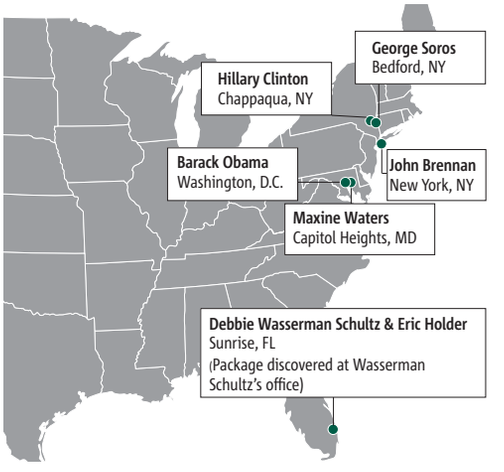
8 THINGS TO KNOW

Suspected bombs target top Democrats, CNN NYC office

President Trump made a rare call for bipartisan unity.

GETTY IMAGES & CNN TWITTER



Police have intercepted suspected bombs mailed to former President Barack Obama, Hillary Clinton and other high-profile Democrats, as well as to CNN, in what New York officials on Wednesday branded an act of terrorism.

The packages were similar in appearance and "contain potentially destructive devices," the FBI said. Other officials said the devices looked like pipe bombs, similar to one that was found and detonated by police on Monday at the home of George Soros, a prominent Democratic Party donor and frequent target of right-wing conspiracy theories.

With the country deeply polarized, the news brought a new level of tension to the Nov. 6 election that will decide whether Democrats can take majorities now held by President Donald Trump's Republicans in Congress.

All the packages were mailed in manila envelopes with bubble wrap interiors and had the return address of Debbie Wasserman Schultz, a U.S. representative and former chair of the Democratic Party, the FBI said.

The U.S. Secret Service intercepted packages addressed to Obama at his Washington home and to Clinton at her home in New York state.

The CNN bureau in New York also received a device looking like a pipe bomb, leading police to evacuate the Time Warner building in a busy part of New York City near Central Park. Mayor Bill de Blasio described it as "a serious bomb."

Eric Holder, who was U.S. attorney general under Obama, and Democratic Rep. Maxine Waters were also among those targeted.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

"This clearly is an act of terror attempting to undermine our free press and leaders of this country through acts of violence," New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio told a news conference.

Trump condemned what he called "despicable acts" and vowed to bring those responsible to justice.

Trump, who usually relishes in making partisan attacks on Democrats, also issued a rare call for unity.

"In these times, we have to unify, we have to come together, and send one very clear, strong, unmistakable message that acts or threats of political violence of any kind have no place in the United States of America," Trump said at the White House.

"We're extremely angry, upset and unhappy about what we witnessed this morning, and we will get to the bottom of it," Trump said.

All of the targets are frequently maligned by right-wing critics. Trump has repeatedly criticized CNN as "fake news" and disparaged the mainstream media.

"There is a total and complete lack of understanding at the White House about the seriousness of their continued attacks on the media," CNN President Jeff Zucker said in a statement that was read out on CNN. "The president, and especially the White House press secretary, should understand that their words matter. Thus far they have shown no comprehension of that."

U.S. Democratic leaders in Congress said Trump's call for unity rang "hollow" because of his past statements that condone acts of violence.

"Time and time again, the president has condoned physical violence and divided Americans with his words and his actions," Senate Democratic Leader Chuck Schumer and House of Representatives top Democrat Nancy Pelosi said in a statement.

The package to Clinton was found late on Tuesday while the one addressed to Obama was recovered early on Wednesday, both during routine off-site mail screenings, the Secret Service said. Obama and Clinton were not at risk, they said.

Officials said the package received by CNN was addressed to former CIA director John Brennan, who appeared on CNN periodically before joining cable news rival MSNBC as a paid contributor.

Brennan has been an outspoken critic of Trump, calling the president's performance during a July joint news conference with Russian President Vladimir Putin in Helsinki "nothing short of treasonous."

The package sent to CNN also contained an envelope of white powder that experts were analyzing, Police Commissioner James O'Neill said.

In the weeks following the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, anthrax spores were mailed to news media offices and two U.S. senators, killing five people and infecting 17 others.

A suspicious package was found at the building that houses Wasserman Schultz's office, the Broward Sheriff's office said.

The FBI said the package was meant for Holder but rerouted to the return address in Florida. REUTERS

TWO DEAD IN KENTUCKY SUPERMARKET SHOOTING

2 One adult male and one adult female were killed in a shooting on Wednesday at a Louisville, Kentucky supermarket, police said. There were no other injuries, Jeffersontown Police Chief Sam Rogers told reporters at the scene in a televised press briefing. Earlier local media had reported multiple other victims in the shooting at a Kroger Co. supermarket. Wave3 News said one of the fatalities was in the parking lot outside the grocery store in Jeffersontown, about 15 miles from downtown Louisville. A person was taken into custody following the shooting, according to the Jeffersontown police dispatch center. Steve Zinninger told Wave3 News his father was waiting outside the supermarket when he heard shooting from inside the store and panicked people began running out of the supermarket. Zinninger said the shooter casually walked toward his father in the parking lot with a gun in his hand. He said his father took out his gun and confronted the man from behind his car. "He [the armed man] said, 'Please don't shoot and I won't shoot you, whites don't kill whites,'" Zinninger told Wave3 News.

WINNING MEGA TICKET SOLD IN SOUTH CAROLINA

3 Only one ticket matched all six numbers in the U.S. Mega Millions lottery for a jackpot of $1.537 billion, just short of a world record, an official said on Wednesday. The ticket was sold in Simpsonville, South Carolina, at KC Mart convenience store, the city's mayor, Janice Curtis, said in a telephone interview on Wednesday. The town of 22,000, about 14 miles from Greenville, was abuzz as people clamored to learn more about the winner, but in South Carolina the person who hit the jackpot can opt to remain anonymous. The buyer of the ticket beat the odds of 1 in 303 million to win the Mega Millions drawing for one of the largest jackpots in U.S. history. The jaw-dropping jackpot failed to break the record for lottery winnings, held by the $1.586 billion Powerball prize in January 2016. Before the drawing, lottery officials had been reporting an expected $1.6 billion jackpot, based on estimates tied to historical patterns, lottery spokeswoman Carole Bober Gentry said on Wednesday. After the drawing, lottery officials rolled back the jackpot total to $1.537 billion, based on actual ticket sales.

Food Network star talks pumpkin carving

"It's a very organic art form," said Lenny Calvin, who currently appears on Food Network's "Halloween Wars."

NIKKI M. MASCALI
nikki.mascali@metro.us

FOOD NETWORK

Aside from eating (lots of) candy and dressing up in costumes, pumpkin carving is a quintessential Halloween tradition. And it's one Lenny Calvin of Long Beach, New York, takes very seriously.

"I certainly do see faces in pumpkins — it's a very organic art form," the pumpkin carving expert told Metro. "I don't go in with a predetermined face I want to create. It depends on the face I see, the stem."

Calvin isn't just a random, self-taught "expert" on pumpkin carving, though. The artist is currently appearing on season 8 of Food Network's "Halloween Wars," which will air its finale at 9 p.m. Sunday.

On "Halloween Wars," six teams consisting of an expert pumpkin carver, a cake artist and sugar master face off to create Halloween-themed edible displays that are both delicious and scary. It's the second time Calvin has appeared on the show; he first showed off his mastery pumpkin carving during season 6.

"The talent gets better and better every year," Calvin said of the differences between his "Halloween Wars" appearances.

But even an expert at pumpkin carving isn't without mishaps.

"The type of pumpkin carving that I do, you don't break into the pumpkin," Calvin said. "So the biggest mishap is spending 10 to 12 hours on a carve and then going right into the pumpkin and ruining the whole thing."

When it comes to picking out the right pumpkin to carve, "it's not a science," he said. "Find one that feels heavy for its size and has a greener stem."

And don't be wary of misshapen pumpkins as "they lend for more space," Calvin added. "I carve what most people discard. You get a lot of fun faces with weird-shaped pumpkins."

If you think this pumpkin-carving expert lives for this time of year, when pumpkin spice everything is abundant, think again.

"I don't eat any kind of pumpkin stuff," Calvin said with a laugh.

Chocolate is the most popular candy handed out in all regions of the U.S. on Halloween — except in our nation's capital. ISTOCK

What's the most popular Halloween candy?

If we're being completely honest, there are just two things that matter this time of year, no matter your age: what Halloween costume you'll be wearing, and what goodies you'll be handing out. While costume trends come and go, if you've ever wondered what the most popular Halloween candy is, we've got your answer.

According to online grocer Peapod, the nation's top picks for the past three years were Snack Size Kit Kats, Snack Size Reese's Peanut Butter Cups, Fun Size Twix, Brach's Candy Corn and Hershey's Milk Chocolate Bars.

Before we dive a little deeper to break down the most popular Halloween candy by region, let's talk about the sole region of the U.S. that doesn't have chocolate as its top pick: Washington, D.C.

What, you may wonder, is the most popular Halloween candy handed out in our nation's capital, then? Candy corn. Yes, candy corn. (It kinda makes sense, though, doesn't it?) NIKKI M. MASCALI

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

"Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis…"

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our "Treatment Formula."

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action… step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Would you live in a haunted house? UNSPLASH

There's one thing millennials aren't ruining: Haunted houses

They'll buy them, but there's a catch.

SAM BRODSKY

Millennials are blamed for a handful (read: heaps) of things. The demise of department stores — also, as it turns out, Hooters. Ruining brunch. Taking over the internet one selfie and politically-charged tweet at a time. Disrupting the traditional 9 to 5 workflow with their work-from-home ways. But, when it comes to haunted-home sales, millennials would make those numbers soar.

The Realtor.com 2018 Haunted Real Estate Report, based on responses from 1,067 online surveys distributed across the country, found that one in three people are willing to purchase a haunted house if they can get some kind of deal out of it. This holds true especially for millennials.

"If a house is commensurately priced, or has desirable features, the fact that it may be haunted seems to matter less," chief economist for Realtor.com Danielle Hale said in a statement. "This report shows that, for those looking for a good deal, a lower price, better neighborhood or larger kitchen can balance out a few spooky happenings."

Fourty-nine percent of Americans say they won't buy real estate with a history of strange noises or ghost sightings, even if it comes with great perks. But, of the third that would go for haunted-home sales, millennials are more likely to brave it than other generations.

Millennials ain't afraid of no ghosts. ISTOCK

The most attractive selling point for millennials? A lower price tag.

It makes sense considering, as Forbes reports, Gen Y has less disposable income than past generations.

Brooklyn's Nightmare Machine, advertised as a "millennial haunted house," promises an even greater deal: picture-ready spaces perfect for social media (think 29Rooms, Halloween edition).

Millennials, ask yourselves this: Would you risk getting scared if it meant you could save money or improve your Instagram aesthetic? Really think about it.

It's interesting to note, though, nearly a quarter of Gen-Xers interviewed in the report say they will buy a haunted house without negotiating terms — it doesn't matter to them. (As for what this implies about the difference between generations, we'll let you decide.)

This is the third Haunted Real Estate Report Realtor.com has released — the first was conducted in 2013. A company spokesperson confirms that last year's focused on overall trends related to haunted-home sales, and data was not broken up into age groups as it was for the 2018 iteration.

The Medical Director of urology is David Shusterman, MD. Dr. Shusterman is a board certified urologist who specializes in state of the art compassionate kidney stone treatment.

Safe, effective ways to treat kidney stones

Anyone who has ever suffered from kidney stones knows just how painful it can be. It's little wonder that more than half a million people go to the emergency room for kidney stone problems every year, according to the National Kidney Foundation.

So what are kidney stones? They're essentially hard mineral deposits that form inside the kidneys. When the fluid in urine is unable to break them down, they'll pass through the ureter and bladder—which is generally a painful process. There's a wealth of anecdotal reports likening kidney stone pain to that of childbirth. The truth is that no two cases are alike, but early diagnosis is critical when it comes to getting ahead of it. Many times, this comes down to understanding the specific risk factors that might make you more likely to develop kidney stones. Family history, frequent dehydration, certain dietary issues, and obesity are all on the list. Board Certified Urologist Dr. David Shusterman of NY Urology takes a proactive approach. Thanks to a mix of preventative medicine and some simple lifestyle changes, you may be able to prevent kidney stones before they ever develop.

If a kidney stone is already in motion, Dr. Shusterman's expert team can quickly identify it using ultrasound imaging, then get things moving with innovative treatment options that have made NY Urology a nationally recognized leader in the field. He leads with holistic medicine with the goal being to break down kidney stones so that they can pass as naturally and easily as possible. NY Urology provides a cutting-edge, noninvasive treatment called extracorporeal shock wave lithotripsy (ESWL), which relies on sound waves to break apart the stones via focused vibrations. The in-office procedure is completely safe, and recovery is typically pretty swift.

Another option is placing something called a nephrostomy tube into the kidneys. This plastic catheter essentially lets urine drain directly from the kidneys during the treatment process. The result is near-immediate pain relief because you're eliminating backed-up urine and helping things flow more easily. A ureteral stent works in much the same way, bolstering the body's ability to drain urine and, in turn, safely encouraging the natural healing process. The soft plastic stent is temporarily placed directly into the ureter to help urine flow more freely. When ureters are blocked up by kidney stones, pain and discomfort are on the horizon. Stents open these passages.

When all else fails, NY Urology also specializes in minimally invasive surgery using a device called a ureteroscopy to eliminate painful, stubborn kidney stones. Making its way through the urethra and bladder, and into the ureter, the device zeros in on the kidney stone and swiftly removes it. The best part is that it's a fairly straightforward outpatient procedure that requires no incisions. In extreme situations where the stone is too large to remove with a ureteroscopy, Dr. Shusterman may call on a more in-depth procedure that involves a small incision in the back. The upside here is that the success rate is high, helping patients safely get rid of large kidney stones in one fell swoop.

Whether you're looking to prevent kidney stones or address one that's already wreaking havoc, NY Urology is your best resource. Book an appointment today with Dr. Shusterman, located at 800 Second Avenue on the corner of 42nd Street. Call (212) 991-9991 and start mapping out a plan for living a pain-free life without kidney stones.

Expect to see a lot of these outfits on Halloween. KATELYN CHEF

It's Halloween! Whether you live for the candy (give us all the chocolate) or yearn to dress up as someone else for the day, Oct. 31 is quickly approaching. Need some go-to costume ideas and tips? No worries, we have the ideas and creative dress-up hacks.

Every costume idea from spooky to cute is detailed below. So, the only question looming is, what will you be?

On All Hallows Eves' past, pop culture icons and reality-TV stars were the hot costume ideas. Today, let's take the creativity a step further and dress up as your favorite hobbies, colors, and other cool commodities pinned on your Pinterest boards.

The creatives at Cricut.com shared with Metro their favorite handmade Halloween costumes that are sure to be a hit at your masquerade, too. Simply by creating a few iron-on appliques (à la Cricut Maker cutting machine), you too can turn your favorite green dress into an original "greenhouse"-themed costume as featured on the blog, The House That Lars Built.

Cricut told Metro: "Cutting accessories and costume pieces out of paper is a great way to keep costume costs low, and with the Cricut Maker you can still create professional-looking pieces."

Taking your Halloween costume from the greenhouse to the galaxy, crafters and costume DIYers can transform their basic black gear into a glistening night skyline with the application of cut vinyl metallic stars. Just like that, you're the Milky Way! Tailoring the outfit's details to the costume wearer, either idea can be a great option for any guy or gal wanting to dress up this year.

However, gardeners, florals, stardust and moons aren't everyone's cup of tea when it comes to perfecting your Oct. 31 attire. A recent article on Elite Daily provided insight into other 2018 Halloween costume inspirations.

Characters from The CW's "Riverdale," '90s icons, Tonya Harding, ABBA's "Dancing Queen" and flamingos are all trending 2018 dress-up themes. Hey, everybody loves a good-time dancing queen.

So, will you dare to dress up?

The legacy of UN peacekeeping in Liberia, Côte d'Ivoire, and Sierra Leone

ANALYSIS

JEAN-PIERRE LACROIX

United Nations
Under-Secretarty General for Peacekeeping Operations

The United Nations Mission in Liberia (UNMIL) successfully closed in March this year. For the first time in 25 years, there are no UN peacekeepers serving in the region because they are not needed anymore. This is good news.

From the mid-90s to the early 2000s, a series of brutal civil wars tore through the Mano River Basin subregion of West Africa.

Starting in Liberia and spreading to Sierra Leone and Côte d'Ivoire, violent conflict uprooted millions and ripped entire societies apart. State authority dissolved, and all of West Africa was threatened with destabilization.

Then something happened: The world engaged.

Peacekeepers were deployed, wars ended, despots were kicked out — most are either no longer alive or in jail — and people began returning home.

The work of building peace started in earnest. Ex-combatants were disarmed, elections were held, and children went back to school — all with the help of the UN.

When Ebola struck in 2014, the region bent but didn't break.

Today, all three countries are at peace with themselves and their neighbors.

The election of George Weah as President of Liberia, the country's first peaceful, democratic transition in seven decades, highlights a country well on its way to sustainable peace and development.

Sierra Leone has held three successful elections since the closure of the United Nations Mission in Sierra Leone, consolidating its post-war democracy.

In 2017, Côte d'Ivoire was the second-fastest growing economy in Sub-Saharan Africa, and it is now a member of the UN Security Council.

Countries that needed the support of Blue Helmets to transition from conflict to peace are today playing an important role in maintaining international stability, including Côte d'Ivoire, by contributing soldiers and police to our missions.

UN peacekeeping played an important role in helping to restore the peace, protect civilians, and facilitate political processes in the Mano River Basin. It was part of a joint international effort led by the region and the governments of the three countries. It came with a price: 547 peacekeepers lost their lives while serving there under the UN flag.

The departure of its peacekeepers earlier this year does not mean that the UN is packing up and leaving. The transition to development has begun, with UN agencies engaged in humanitarian and development support.

The region, under the strong leadership of the Economic Community of West African States, has led the way in facilitating political processes and providing support to resolve conflicts.

But our most important partners have been the people of Liberia, Sierra Leone, and Côte d'Ivoire.

Their determination to recover from the deep wounds of their conflict inspires us to work harder for the millions of vulnerable people living through conflict today.

The international community has also been actively engaged in the region: supporting reconciliation, promoting development and the re-establishment of rule of law and state authority, and conducting major humanitarian operations.

Along with other countries, the United States' assistance has been particularly important for consolidating democratic progress, improving governance, and supporting economic growth.

Our missions of the Mano River Basin provide valuable lessons for us as the UN commemorates the 70th year of UN peacekeeping. When we have clear and achievable mandates from the UN Security Council, with adequate support and resources, as well as the support of our partners, UN peacekeeping works.

The transformation of Liberia, Sierra Leone, and Côte d'Ivoire from conflict to peace and stability is remarkable, and — in a world still learning from its mistakes and still plagued by conflict — it's important for us to remember that when we cooperate and work together, progress is possible. Liberia teaches us that peace may seem elusive, but it is possible.

War and Peace in Liberia, a photo exhibition produced by the Bronx Documentary Center in cooperation with United Nations Peacekeeping, will run from Oct. 26 to Dec. 16. The exhibition features iconic photographs by Tim Hetherington and Chris Hondros, two journalists whose images played a critical role in moving the world to intervene in Liberia.

'Suspiria' director wants to drown his

The Italian director talks us through his reimagining of the 1977 cult classic.

GREGORY WAKEMAN

Luca Guadagnino admits that he wants to drown his audience in terror and dread with "Suspiria" while breaking down how he went about achieving this macabre goal.

A very loose remake of Dario Argento's 1977 cult classic, "Suspiria" revolves around Susie Banning (Dakota Johnson) joining a German dance academy led by Tilda Swinton's Madame Blanc, and as she rises through the ranks, the school becomes increasingly dark, mysterious and dangerous.

"Every great horror movie is a movie that makes you drown in what is the uncanny, the dread, and what controls you but what you can't control," Guadagnino tells Metro. "Every great horror movie is also a reflection of violence. I think the best reflection of violence is the one in which you don't spectacularize it but you show its most terrifying aspects."

But what was it about the original "Suspiria" that Guadagnino wanted to explore with his gruesome and compelling version?

The "Fifty Shades of Grey" actress plays Susie in this horror flick.

"It is a completely spiritual connection. I love Dario's original. It has something to do with the way in which I made my connection to it. I have a very spiritual connection," says Guadagnino. "When you love something so much, you almost want to possess it. I was thinking that with this movie — I could homage an important experience of my life and use it to explore things that have been very important for me, both emotionally and as a film."

"I wanted to create an immersive experience. I don't want the audience to be out of the film ever," he adds. "I want them to be immersed in it. The process was complex to create that, from the script to the performances to the world that we have built and the way in which we have juxtaposed with the editing."

BACKPACKS ON THE SUBWAY!
My Grumble is people who wear backpacks on the subway. First of all, what could possibly be in them? Most of them are gigantic! I can understand carrying a laptop or tablet, but they're flat. What else is filling these backpacks to capacity? A gallon of sanitizer? Six bottles of water? Another flannel shirt? Beard trimmers? Rocks? Look, these people are mostly commuters, which means that they're not far from their homes. Why are they packing for a camping trip? But what really makes me grumble is when they get on a packed train and the backpacks add at least a foot to the space they take up. And when they turn quickly, they usually wind up hitting me! Ugh!

One of the key components of "Suspiria" is its score from Thom Yorke. As you'd expect, Guadagnino had only the highest of praise for the Radiohead musician.

"The music of Thom Yorke was integral and a great protagonist in the film," says Guadagnino. "That was a very neutral collaboration. He sent material before we had started shooting the film. I was very in awe of what he was presenting us. It was beautiful."

Ultimately, though, because "Suspiria" is so provocative and uncompromising, Guadagnino is well aware that he has created a movie that will likely polarize audiences. But rather than being scared of a potential backlash, he encourages it.

"Honestly I don't do a movie thinking how people are going to react. I do a movie thinking and making sure that an audience will be engaged and I treat them with an intelligence that an audience deserves to be treated," says Guadagnino. "If divisive is the nature of the movie, that is fine with me. I am not scared. I am never scared. I think as a filmmaker you can never be scared about what you are aiming to do. Never."

"Suspiria" opens in theaters Oct. 26.

‘Lore’ season 2 showrunner credits ‘Aliens’ with his love of horror

Sean Crouch reveals what makes true horror tick.

ANDREW HUSBAND

Sean Crouch got his start in television with shows like “Veronica Mars” and “Numb3rs,” but ever since he saw “Aliens” when it opened in 1986, the new showrunner for season 2 of “Lore” has always wanted to do horror.

“When I was 13, my favorite movie was ‘Aliens,’” he says. “That was the movie that sort of changed my life. That’s when I realized you could make these great action movies, with great female action stars, but still be scared by what’s happening on screen. From that moment on, I’ve always wanted to do science fiction or horror, so I tried moving my career that way as best as I could. I took jobs on other shows at first, but I kept telling my agents what I really wanted to do.

“Once I got that ‘Exorcist’ gig,” he adds, “I was really happy.”

Following Syfy’s “Dominion,” which ran from 2014 to 2015, Crouch scored a producing and writing gig on the second season of Fox’s acclaimed adaptation of “The Exorcist,” which operated as a horror mythology series. That approach to distinctive and self-contained stories is one that Crouch took to “Lore,” where he took over as showrunner back in February.

Based on the hugely popular podcast created by Aaron Mahnke, the first season of “Lore” premiered Friday, Oct. 13, 2017 on Amazon Prime. Roughly a year later, the second season’s batch of six new episodes hit the streaming service.

Expect some big changes for “Lore” season 2. AMAZON STUDIOS

Much like the previous six episodes, the latest entries will delve into new horrifying tales of murder and the supernatural, like “Hinterkaifeck” and “Prague Clock,” that are based on actual accounts. Unlike season 1, however, the sophomore season of “Lore” focuses more on narrative and character than combining the show’s cinematic dramatizations with documentary footage.

“That was actually pretty much how I got the job,” Crouch says of his pitch to emphasize story and character over the previous season’s documentary-like approach. “When I went to Amazon, I said, ‘I would love to turn this into a show that I can’t watch with my kids.’ I want them to have that experience when they’re 13, not when they’re seven. It’s still set in the unscripted world, but it’s all a narrative now. We’re trying to make it scarier. Sure, we have more money and the production value is great, but it’s all a smaller, simpler story.”

Throughout the conversation, Crouch repeatedly returns to the movies and television shows that frightened — and engaged — him when he was younger. “The Twilight Zone” is a big part of his personal mythos, but so too is — yes, you guessed it — “Aliens.” And even though Ridley Scott’s first film, “Alien,” has more in common with the horror genre than James Cameron’s action-heavy sequel, he’s right on the money.

“I think ‘Alien’ is more of the traditional haunted-house film,” he explains. “There’s a monster on the loose. Whereas ‘Aliens’ is that and everything else. That’s why, to me, ‘Aliens’ is one of my favorite movies of all time, because it takes me through all the different emotions that are possible. That’s what I want to try to do with horror.”

Crouch continues, noting how horror needs “to have a heart” to work.

“It has to have something relatable, something that you love, so that you can be worried about losing it,” says Crouch. “In horror, it’s most likely the case that you’re going to lose whatever that thing is.”

“Lore” season 2 is now on Amazon Prime.

Meet the new Sabrina

MATT JUUL

Set in the same universe as The CW's hit "Riverdale" series, "Chilling Adventures of Sabrina" is an updated take on the Spellman story that's a bit darker than the ABC comedy starring Melissa Joan Hart. The laugh tracks have been replaced with terrifying horror elements and some serious teenage drama. There's still a bit of humor, though, and of course, Salem the talking cat is involved (although he may not be as chatty this time around). We spoke with star Kiernan Shipka about becoming Sabrina, if she'd ever want to do a crossover with "Riverdale," and more.

This version of Sabrina is definitely of the times, as your character is an outspoken feminist who isn't afraid to stand up for women and fight the patriarchy.
That was one of the first things that really drew me in about the script, that you could tell that it totally had a feminist core to it, which I loved. I love that we have women in the writers room telling a teenage girl's story. It makes a big difference, it really does. I really love that the show manages to be an escape from reality while also mirroring so much of reality. It kind of feels like it achieves both simultaneously, which is pretty interesting. I'm just really happy that the show has a message and, at the end of the day, a really strong, solid foundation in being a good person, fighting for what you believe in, sticking up for your friends and standing up for justice.

Aside from the witchcraft and teenage drama, the series still has some humorous elements that are reminiscent of the original show. Did you look to the old series at all for guidance?
I pretty much stayed in my own lane, to be quite honest. I never watched the original series and, when I was prepping this, I was so in it as far as just like, "This is my Sabrina and my only Sabrina" kind of situation. That was sort of where I've gone with the character as far as drawing from stuff. I kind of stuck to the more recent comics, as well as just the scripts, to really focus in on it.

Don't mess with these witches.

You're allergic to cats, so that must've made working with Salem a bit difficult.
It's a bit of an obstacle, but that's OK. Salem and I can't really touch, but we can be in the same room, which is a positive step in our relationship. So it's all good.

Can we expect Salem to be as chatty as the original?
I mean, he may or may not talk, but he's definitely not the Salem that you're used to seeing. Definitely a bit more subdued.

Since Sabrina lives in the universe of "Riverdale," would you be down for a crossover with Betty, Archie and the gang?
Oh it would be wonderful. Honestly, I feel like Sabrina would get along with pretty much everyone on "Riverdale" really well. I just find that Archie, Betty and Sabrina have so many similarities, I feel like they could become a little power trio, that I'm really into. I feel like they're all fixers. They're all, like, fed up with their town and society and want to fix it. I think that they could do something really fun. I'm always down for a crossover.

If you could make a super-coven of fictional witches, whom would you want to team up with?
I would definitely want Hermione to be part of my super-coven, personally, because I think we look alike, too, and that could be really funny and cool. And I feel like we should get all the witches of Eastwick in there just because they're a very powerful trio, in my opinion. And I love Susan Sarandon and would love to have her as a part of my coven, too.

"Chilling Adventures of Sabrina" debuts Oct. 26 on Netflix.

New travel guide details spookiest spots in New England

"Notorious New England: A Travel Guide to Tragedy and Treachery" features more than 55 locations in Massachusetts and beyond to get you in the Halloween spirit.

New England is worth visiting all year around, but the region really thrives in autumn with its picturesque fall foliage, seasonal activities like apple picking, and of course, its haunted history.

There are plenty of spooky sites throughout New England, and authors Summer Paradis and Sandra Vivian Graul have detailed some of the darkest attractions in their new book.

"Notorious New England: A Travel Guide to Tragedy and Treachery" features more than 55 locations to get you in the Halloween spirit — though they're also worth visiting any time of the year when you want to get a little spooked.

It's a hybrid of a local history lesson and a true user-friendly travel book, the authors said, detailing not just what makes these spots sinister but directions, nearby eateries and restrooms, and information on how suitable the locations are for different ages or those with mobility needs.

That local history-lesson aspect means this book goes beyond simple ghost stories. The majority of the locations covered in "Notorious New England" are connected to "actual documented happenings," said Graul.

But why would people want to visit such spooky sites? Well, besides the fact that some people just like being scared, these places — home to tragic or mysterious circumstances — tap into something "raw" about human nature, according to Paradis.

"That morbid curiosity is innate in us all from a psychological standpoint, and sites like the ones we highlight allow you to explore those dark corners of your mind you don't always feel comfortable discussing in polite company," she said. "Many of these locations not only engage you in discussing tragedy openly, but encourage you to immerse yourself in it. For example, thousands of people a year, myself included, recreate with glee the crime-scene photos of the Borden murders."

It took the two a year of research, traveling and writing to complete the collection, during which they got a bit freaked out as well.

For Graul, her most unnerving incidents in creating this book happened in Massachusetts areas. One was at Rutland Prison Camp, where she and Paradis were recording with their paranormal investigation equipment in the cellar when they said they felt a "presence" and heard a voice telling them to "Leave now!" They ran to their car and sped away.

"Later, when we reviewed the camera still shots, we discovered that we captured a particularly large and bright orb," Graul said. "When we zoomed in to study it, it clearly showed an angry male face with almost a screaming expression on it. My heart stopped when I saw that picture. In that moment, I realized that must have been the spirit we felt and heard, and I was chilled to the bone."

"That morbid curiosity is innate in us all from a psychological standpoint, and sites like the ones we highlight allow you to explore those dark corners of your mind."
Sandra Vivian Graul, co-author

Massachusetts boasts the most eerie locales out of New England, Paradis said. So many, in fact, that they had to skip some interesting Bay State spots to make the book more balanced across the region.

Salem is mentioned in "Notorious New England," of course (and for good reason, the authors say), but if you've already checked it off your Halloween to-visit list, don't worry. "Notorious New England" lays out plenty of other suggestions for spooky spots worth visiting.

Out of all the eerie entries, Paradis said that Wayside Inn in Sudbury, Massachusetts, is her favorite spooky spot.

"It is alive with history that spans all the way back to our earliest days as a nation," she said. To her, the place "buzzes" with paranormal activity, and yet she always manages to get "an excellent night's sleep there," she added, "despite feeling positively surrounded by the ghosts."

For Graul, the top spot goes to Wilson Castle in Proctor, Vermont, which was built in 1867.

"The castle holds beautiful and fascinating items from around the world, including a tea set gifted to the owners by Mary, Queen of Scots, and is located in a peaceful, beautiful valley of the Green Mountain National Forest," she said. "The spirit presence of both the original matron of the home, Lady Johnson, and the current owner's ancestors is very strong there."

Are the Giants setting up for a run at Derek Carr?

The Giants are having a fire sale. Is it to get an established quarterback?

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Derek Carr could be on the move this season as his relationship with the Raiders deteriorates. GETTY IMAGES

The New York Giants are beginning a fire sale after making a pair of deals before the NFL's Oct. 30 trade deadline. While they are getting nothing of note, it could very well lead to the acquisition of Oakland Raiders quarterback Derek Carr.

With their 2018 season already over after a 1-6 start, the Giants have put the for-sale sign on almost the entire roster. Tuesday saw the team trade former first-round draft pick and cornerback Eli Apple to the New Orleans Saints before sending All-Pro defensive tackle Damon Harrison, arguably the team's most valuable defensive lineman, to the Detroit Lions on Wednesday morning.

Both trades yielded in draft picks, the Giants getting a 2019 fourth-rounder and 2020 seventh-rounder for Apple and a 2019 fifth-rounder for Harrison.

It's an underwhelming return, especially for Harrison, but there could be an ulterior motive as to why the Giants are making these moves.

And it centers around the quarterback position.

Veteran passer Eli Manning's football mortality has become a hot topic around New York as it's painfully clear that the 37-year-old can no longer competently lead an offense, or at least the Giants' offense. The immobile quarterback is playing behind an offensive line that constantly has him running for his life as almost no time in the pocket is resulting in him missing out on the outside threats of Odell Beckham Jr., Sterling Shepard and Evan Engram.

If placed behind a real offensive line, there is a chance that Manning could be serviceable, which is why the Giants might want to seriously explore trading Manning, though head coach Pat Shurmur said he wouldn't expect that to happen.

But the Giants are going nowhere with Manning and it remains to be seen if rookie quarterback Kyle Lauletta, drafted in the fourth round out of Richmond this year, could actually develop into a franchise quarterback.

This is where Derek Carr comes in.

The 27-year-old has a reported "fractured relationship" with his teammates and the organization does not view him as the quarterback of the future, per Marcus Thompson II of the Athletic.

There is no denying Carr has had a difficult start to the season with eight interceptions compared to just seven touchdowns. But he is still completing over 70 percent of his passes for a Raiders team that has completely nose-dived from AFC West contender to basement-dweller.

Much of that has to do with new head coach Jon Gruden, who played a big part in trading away All-Pro defensive end Kahlil Mack and wide receiver Amari Cooper over the last two months. The franchise's willingness to deal franchise cornerstones suggests that the rebuilding Raiders wouldn't be hesitant to pull the trigger on a Carr deal.

It would provide the Giants with a younger, more athletic quarterback who is capable of extending the play behind the subpar offensive line. Over his first four seasons in the league, Carr has averaged 3,672 yards with 25 touchdowns and 11 interceptions per year.

It wouldn't be outside the realm of possibility if Manning were offered to the Raiders. He is signed through the 2019 season and could be a veteran stopgap while the Raiders search for a new franchise quarterback.

In order to sweeten the deal for Oakland, because the Raiders would likely be asked to take on most of Manning's $11.5 million next year, the Giants could offer a bevy of draft picks to help advance their rebuild. After the Apple and Harrison trades, the Giants have nine draft picks in the 2019 selection process alone.

Mickey Callaway's future dependent on new GM

An unimpressive first season has some asking about the future of the Mets manager. Would the new general manager show Callaway the door?

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Mets manager Mickey Callaway's job could be in jeopardy depending on who the new GM is. GETTY IMAGES

The New York Mets are on the precipice of change this winter as the organization nears a decision on its new general manager. As reported earlier this week, the position is down to just three finalists in Doug Melvin, Chaim Bloom and Brodie Van Wagenen. While the new GM will be ordered with the task of trying to turn around a big-market organization that has been run like a small one, and played like a minor-league one at times, there is also the issue of what to do with manager Mickey Callaway.

The 43-year-old had a difficult first season, to say the least, as a Mets team that was at least expected to make a push for the National League East crown stumbled to a 77-85 finish, good for just fourth in the division.

Along the way came questions about Callaway's ability to manage as some questionable decisions were put under the magnifying glass, but injuries once again played a large part in the organization's fortunes for a second-straight losing season.

Still, there have been some whispers around baseball questioning Callaway's future running the team. Even he addressed those rumors, and almost seemed too willing to accept his fate, should he be fired.

"If they want to make a change and it's better for the Mets, then I am on board with it," Callaway said back in September, according to the New York Post. While Bloom and Van Wagenen's plans have not been disclosed, Melvin offered a glimpse of what he'll do if he's hired as the new Mets general manager.

"My feeling is that he probably deserves a chance to do this again," Melvin said on Tuesday. "I want to sit down, if I get this job, and talk extensively with Mickey and see his philosophy and that. But I think he probably deserves a chance because he's been a good baseball guy."

While 2018 was a lost season, it is worth noting Callaway's success when working with the pitching staff. Jacob deGrom is likely the National League Cy Young Award winner behind a historic season while Zack Wheeler has developed into a solid No. 3 arm behind deGrom and Noah Syndergaard.

Yankees GM Brian Cashman revealed that teams around the league want to trade for Gary Sanchez. GETTY IMAGES

Teams have been calling Yankees for Gary Sanchez

There are teams around Major League Baseball that believe the New York Yankees are done with Gary Sanchez — at least according to general manager Brian Cashman.

Last week on the Michael Kay Show, Cashman revealed that he had received some interest for the catcher, who saw a dramatic fall from grace over the past year.

Entering the 2018 season, many believed that Sanchez could have very well been the best all-around hitter in the Yankees lineup. After all, he was coming off a 2017 campaign in which he batted .279, clubbed 33 home runs and drove in 90 runs in just 122 games.

Instead of that average climbing toward the .290 mark, which was expected to happen, Sanchez's numbers plummeted as he batted a miserable .186 with 18 home runs and 53 RBI in an 89-game season that was plagued with slumps, defensive miscues, lack of hustle, benchings and injuries. It forced the Yankees to lean on Austin Romine heavily at times throughout the season, who put up better overall numbers than Sanchez in 77 games as he posted a .244 average with 10 home runs and 42 RBI.

Sanchez managed to return to the lineup regularly in September, and had one memorable night during the postseason when he knocked a pair of home runs out of Fenway Park in Game 2 of the ALDS, the Yankees' lone win of the series.

But for some around baseball to think that it was his last contribution in a Yankees uniform was asinine to Cashman, who was quick to point out that Sanchez isn't going anywhere.

"We know what he's capable of doing," Cashman said. "And I'm already getting phone calls, to be honest, from clubs trying to knock on our door to see if he's available. And he's not... He will be our catcher."

It's the logical move for the Yankees considering Sanchez is just 25 years old, under team control until 2022, and still was one of the best power-hitting catchers in baseball in 2018 despite the nightmare of a season. While many Yankees fans might have been on Sanchez's case, it could simply be a blip on the radar for the franchise catcher.
